Types of Sentences:

A sentence is a group of words that conveys a complete idea. Complete sentences must have at least one subject and predicate, and the predicate contains a verb. A subject is what we talk of and the predicate describes the subject. Complete sentences start with a capital letter, and they end with a punctuation mark such as a period, exclamation point, or question mark depending on the type of sentence....

There are four types of sentences that are used in writing -

- declarative,
- exclamatory,
- imperative and
- Interrogative.

Each type is used in a specific situation and each has its own punctuation mark.

Declarative sentences (statement)

A declarative statement or assertive sentence is the most basic type of statement. They are meant to convey information and are separated by periods. A simple declarative statement allows you to create basic statements such as:

- I am a teacher.
- There is a white palace.
- The cat is sleeping on the sofa.
- She likes the blue colour.

Note:- Declarative sentence always ends with a period (full stop)..

2. Interrogative Types of sentences (question)

Interrogative sentences are used to ask questions. Questions can be of any type. These are the direct questions separated by the question mark.

Examples:-

Why are you going there?

Do you love to play cricket?

What do you want; chocolate or ice cream?

Should I come with you?

3. Imperative Types of sentences (commands and requests)

Imperative sentences are used for commands, requests or orders. They can be in any form like direct order, general advice or polite request. Many imperative sentences are separated by period but sometimes more forceful commands end with an exclamation mark.

Examples:-

Sit down!

Please give me a glass of water.

Pick up the garbage when you go.

Don't make noise!

Exclamatory types of sentences (exclamation):

An exclamation is a sentence that is used to express a sudden strong feeling and ends with an exclamation mark. Similar to declarative statements in that they provide information, but end with an exclamation point instead of a period.

Examples:-

Hurrah! India won the match.

Wow, how good this is!

How beautifully she has drawn the painting!

How he lied!...
